Bay Council still at odds with Wastewater District

By BREARD SNELLINGS
The controversy between the City of Bay St. Louis and the Waveland Regional Wastewater Management District continues.

At Tuesday's meeting of the Bay St. Louis City Council, the councilmen again balked at the wastewater district proposal of raising city sewerage rates an average of $2 per month per user.

City attorney Joseph Gex read a letter from Waveland Mayor John Longo, chairman of the wastewater district's board of directors, informing the Bay councilmen of the contract between the district and the City of Bay St. Louis, the City of Waveland and Hancock County.

The Waveland Board of Aldermen have already agreed to the $2 monthly rate hike for Waveland residents.

The district says the $2 figure is also necessary from Bay St. Louis to fund the projected $110,000 district budget.

Councilman Gene Taylor said that he felt some 80 percent of the proposed district budget earmarked for a new truck and salaries seemed too much.

In discussion, the councilmen were in general agreement that the monies requested by the district from the City of Bay St. Louis may be too much, since the "lagoon," or sewerage oxidation pond, also shouldn't cost any more to operate than it does presently.

In conjunction with that, the council passed a resolution that Gene Owens Engineering Firm of Baton Rouge be the engineers of record, contracted to modify the lagoon with a multicell aeration system, and that the district be informed of this proposal.

In their letter to the district, signed by Harry Farve, president of the Bay St. Louis City Council, the councilmen said:

"In response to your letter of Feb. 17, 1983 please be advised that (the council) strongly disagrees with the proportions to be borne by the City of Bay St. Louis, in so far as the payroll expense and hospital terms are concerned.

"The (city) does not feel that at this time that 60 percent of the man hours are being used at the oxidation pond."

The district had voted their projected budget based on Bay St. Louis paying 60 percent of that $110,000 figure, that in turn based on the fact there are 2,500 users in Bay St. Louis compared to some 2,100 users in Waveland.

The letter from the city council to the district continues: "We have contacted Mr. James Palmer of the Attorney General's office and Mr. Caleb Dana of the Bureau of Air and Water Pollution Control in Jackson concerning this problem.

"Mr. Palmer has informed us that he will be in our area sometime this week and will try to meet with all parties involved in order to arrive at an amicable settlement of this problem."

Rather than recess, the council decided to adjourn until March 8, so no public meeting with the wastewater district and the Bay city council has been set up as yet.

There is a problem in that, according to terms of the contract between the two cities, the county and the wastewater district, the first City of Bay St. Louis bill for monthly wastewater district sewerage treatment came due on Jan. 25.

Section 8 of the contract reads "The Public Agency (in this case the City of Bay St. Louis) is unconditionally obligated to pay the District the contract sums when due."

In other business, the council approved a loan from Merchants Bank, at 10 percent interest, to Bay Junior High School for $29,700 to be used to refurbish the gym, repair the bathrooms and for other expenses.

Also, Pest Control Services, Inc. of Gulfport was awarded a contract for pest control service to 20 HUD-financed Bay homes at a cost of $2,140.

Also, an application for a zoning change from John Pearson of Augusta, Ga. from R1 to R3 for the area at Victoria Street and Turner Road, in order to build a multi-unit apartment building, was rejected by the council.

Also, city attorney Joseph Gex will contact the Public Service Commission regarding a petition of complaints against the installation of a high voltage substation on Turner Road, in the area of Old Spanish Trail.

Ruble Griffin of Bay St. Louis accepts invitation from Mrs. Nuner (Joe) Pilet to one of the Mississippi Gulf Coast's most prestigious social functions previously restricted to women only, the annual Silver Tea sponsored by St. Monica's Guild of Trinity Episcopal Church in Pass Christian. The event is scheduled from 3 to 5 p.m. Friday at the J. Edgar Monroe mansion, 845 East Scenic Drive in The Pass. Guild members said the tea is open 'especially to gentlemen interested in the outstanding architectural features of this Georgian-styled home which is filled with period furnishings and objects of art as well as featuring excellent lighting and drapery treatments.' ## Waveland couple introduces European lodging to Coast

By WAYNE DUCUMB JR.
A California couple is introducing European lodging to Waveland and the Mississippi Gulf Coast. Valerie and Dwight Fisher of Redondo Beach, Calif. several months ago decided to quit their jobs and search for a town to open an English pub which incorporates 'bed and breakfast' service. Valerie Fisher, originally of England, was a legal secretary and had traveled the world while in the U.S. Navy. Dwight Fisher is a chemist and was director of a chemical laboratory in California.

The middle-aged but youthful couple just after they married about two years ago came up with the idea of opening a pub somewhere in the U.S. while visiting her parents in Exmouth, England.

In Europe, many home owners as an extra or primary income source offer a room (bed) and breakfast as a package deal for an economical alternative to higher-priced hotel rooms.

David Treutel of Bay St. Louis, Hancock County Chamber of Commerce World's Fair Committee general chairman, Wednesday said the organization is actively encouraging local homeowners to offer bed and breakfast to visitors attending the 1984 event in New Orleans.

Although many Diamondhead and Bay St. Louis residents are interested in the concept, the Fishers are the first to open a business of this type on the Mississippi Gulf Coast, he reported.

"The concept calls for one night lodging and a continental breakfast for a fee of about $40," Treutel stated.

He added that owners of several antebellum homes in Natchez offer the lodging service which is a concept developing nationwide.

Although the Fishers plan to soon rent three rooms each with complete baths, most English pubs require guests to share a bathroom—a custom not yet accepted by Americans, Valerie Fisher notes.

The Fishers are now finishing an extensive remodeling project on a large summer cottage on Waveland Avenue across the street from Our Shopping Center near US-90.

Many local residents know the old house surrounded by a peach orchard as the former Dixie Wetzel home.

They have now named the house Exmouth Lodge to commemorate the origin of their idea.

Valerie Fisher says their decision to move from the West Coast was prompted by the high cost of living in California.

She reports they previously resided in a houseboat which cost them $800 monthly just in dock rental fees.

Knowing they could not afford to start a bed and breakfast business in California, the Fishers checked a U.S. map for other areas with a mild climate. "We wrote chambers of commerce and mayors all along the Gulf Coast," she says.

At NSTL black history program:

NAACP official urges blacks to 'petition, protect, participate'

By WAYNE DUCUMB JR.
A National Association for the Advancement of Colored People official speaking Tuesday at the National Space Technology Laboratories urged blacks to 'petition, protect and participate' to advance in today's society.

Rev. Dr. Emmett C. Burns of Baltimore, Md., NAACP regional director and a Jackson native, told a capacity crowd at the NSTL Visitors Center Auditorium that blacks must continue to petition the government for better jobs, join NAACP to help protect civil rights efforts, and participate in local civic groups.

Burns spoke as part of the Fourth Annual Black History Month observance now underway at NSTL.

He reviewed the history of civil rights efforts in the U.S. and in doing so described the 1863 Emancipation Proclamation issued by President Abraham Lincoln to abolish slavery as 'my declaration of independence.'

The NAACP official interspersed his speech with humorous stories and an evangelistic speaking style to highlight portions of his talk.

He said civil rights efforts have been more effective in the South and stated, "...if there is any salvation in the nation, we will find it in the South."

He noted in 1980 on summer break from college, he secured a job washing cars at a dealership in Milwaukee, Wis. to earn tuition money.

Burns said he was surprised when he was reprimanded by white employee for utilizing a restroom. He previously thought prejudice did not exist in the North.

"...they didn't want to mix wastes," he sarcastically stated.

The NAACP official in discussing the previous 'separate but equal school systems' which existed in the South said his wife attended schools that were dilapidated.

"They could study geology by looking through the hole in the floor or study astronomy by looking through the hole in the roof," he quipped.

The audience, primarily consisting of black adults, groaned in agreement when Burns noted the segregated Negro schools received old worn out text books from the white schools during those times.

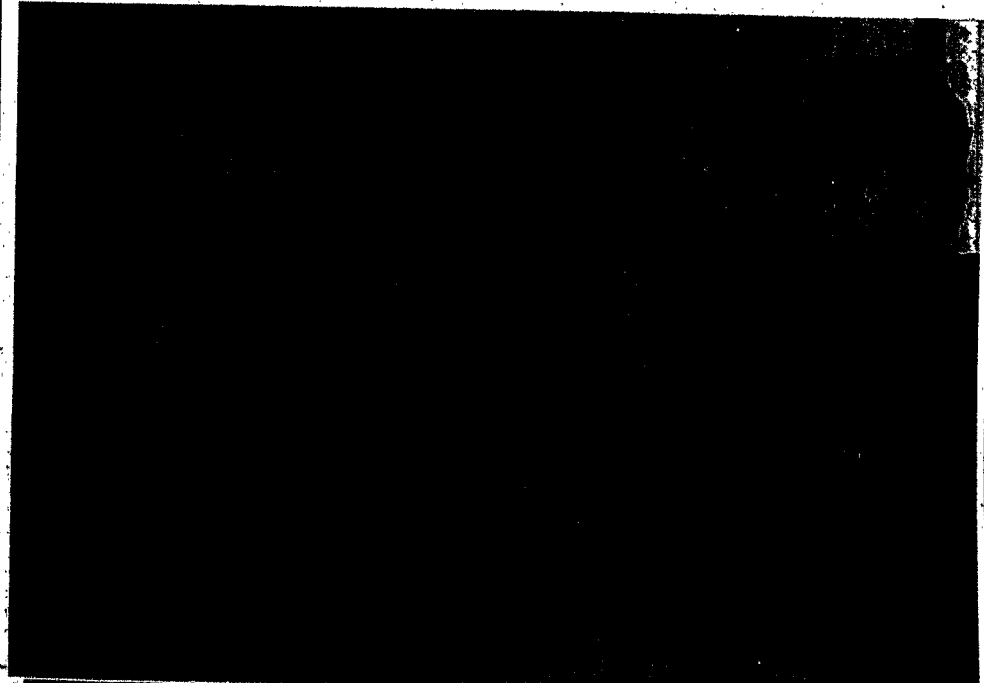

"That's the kind of mentality we have to get rid of in this country," he stated.

Burns criticized the Reagan administration's 'supply side economics' policy.

"In supply side economics, they take tax benefits and cut them, then spend more money in other budget areas," he sarcastically stated.

Burns urged blacks to be productive and hard-working citizens by being 'the best of whatever you are' because Negroes are 'just as good as anybody else.'

He concluded that black youths need heroes as role models today and listed names of famous blacks.

Baltimore, Md.; Jerry Hines, NSTL director; and Lucian Robert, chairperson of the Harrison County Democratic Executive Committee. ## Four candidates qualify for Democratic Primary

By ELLS CUEVA

Four candidates have qualified for the Democratic Primary Election, according to Jerry Heitzmann, Hancock County circuit clerk.

Mississippi's Democratic Primary and Run-off will apparently be held in August.

The Mississippi Legislature voted in 1982 to require all candidates to qualify for an office on the same day, and after a review by the Justice Department, it was rejected Tuesday.

The legislature had also moved the primary elections from August to September and the run-offs in October, which were also rejected by the Justice Department.

Those qualifying by noon Wednesday in Hancock County include J.H.

(Ruster), Graham, R.L., Box 22, Perkinston; and Cecil Ray Farr, R.L. 1, Box 180A, Roperville, both for state representative.

The representative's slot they are seeking is held by Wade Smith and now involves The three precincts of Crane Creek, Flat Top and Leetown in Hancock County.

Marquis W. Atkinson of Saucier is seeking the new senatorial district seat which includes all of Hancock County except the precincts of Crane Creek and Leetown, and portions of Harrison and Jackson counties.

Dominic C. Valachi of Shoreline Park has qualified to run for the Hancock County Board of Supervisors in District One. The seat is currently held by Bert Courge.

Mississippi native killed in Louisiana

The Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Department is investigating the apparent murder of George Necaise Jr., a former resident of Bay St. Louis.

Necaise, 47, was allegedly shot by his wife, Mrs. Cecelia Jones Necaise of Avondale, La., at their Avondale home, 117 Carman Dr.

Mrs. Necaise called Westwego police who arrived on the scene at 3 a.m. Monday morning. They immediately notified the Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Department, since the incident occurred in the sheriff's jurisdiction.

According to L. Robert Garner, public information officer for the sheriff's department, "the victim had five gunshot wounds to the back and head from a small caliber gun."

A small caliber gun was found at the scene, with six shots recently fired from it, investigators reported.

"Mrs. Necaise, the victim's wife, turned herself in to sheriff's department detective James Trapani, who is handling the investigation," said Garner.

The sheriff's department would not release information on what type of gun was used in the shooting.

Lodging

The Fishers received the best replies to their written inquiries from Destin, Fort Walton and Panama City, Fla., and Gulfport, she reports.

In May, they traveled by air to New Orleans and rented an automobile to tour Gulf Coast cities during a one week vacation.

The couple attempted to purchase beachfront homes in Biloxi for their business, but for various reasons those transactions fell through.

Knowing they would need more time to search for an appropriate house, Valerie reports, "We decided to burn our bridges; quit our jobs and move down here."

Towing their automobiles behind a camper and rental truck, in October the couple moved to an apartment in Biloxi.

One weekend while driving along Beach Boulevard, the Fishers stopped at Aubre McMahon Realty in Bay St. Louis which obtained the Waveland house for them through Waveland Realty.

The Fishers began renovating the old neglected house in December and have invested their lifetime savings in the project.

Careful to preserve the architectural style and outstanding qualities of the house, the Fishers have brightened previously dreary rooms with fresh coats of pastel-colored paints and blended in an English atmosphere utilizing a variety of interior furnishings and wall coverings.

Dwight Fisher points out old paint has been stripped from cypress doors to reveal the rich wood grain which will only be covered with protective varnish coat.

He regrets many wood-paneled walls had to be covered with wallboard, but this was necessary due to termite damage.

Also, the green-stained exterior is being painted beige with light brown trim to make the house more visible and cooler in the predominantly warm Waveland climate.

The pub at Exmouth is located in a large back room with two walls of French doors which allow easy view of the grounds.

The other two walls of the pub area are covered with Scottish plaid wallpaper and room furnishings include a Turkish hand-carved wooden bar and wood-burning stove.

The Fisher's live in a large second story bedroom which tops the house and offers an unrestricted view of the grounds through several windows grouped on the north and south sides of the room.

They plan to enclose the home's large front porch with glass where the Fisher's say they will serve tea daily at 4 p.m. (English tea time).

Valerie Fisher emphasizes Exmouth will not only be available to guests, but the general public is encouraged to patronize the pub where food and drink will be served.

Tea time treats will be offered to the public on the porch.

In addition, they plan to renovate the swimming pool located on the five-acre site and divide an adjoining wading pool to construct a hot tub.

The pool will be available to guests and rented for private parties, she reports.

She said lodge guests will be expected to behave according to a few house rules which will forbid loud music, video games and extremely noisy behavior due to the homelike arrangement of rooms.

In addition to the pub and porch, Exmouth guests will also have use of library sitting area which includes a fireplace, she reports.

An English breakfast will be served in the pub daily which will include eggs, bacon, fried mushrooms, kippers (smoked herring), homemade jams or cereals, Valerie Fisher explained.

She says at lunchtime the menu will be hot soups, sandwiches or kidney pie.

Dinner will consist of English dishes which include steak and kidney pie, a chicken and meat pie or a plowman's lunch which includes a meat-filled pastry, potato, onion, sliced cucumber, and pickled onions or peaches.

She notes the dinner meal will be served along with a cheeseboard and dessert may include an English trifle.

The couple also hopes to rent the pub for small wedding receptions and pool area for private parties.

ETV Brief

CONTROVERSIAL FILM

"Asbestos: A Lethal Legacy," a controversial film when it was shown in England in 1982, will be presented on "Nova" at 8 p.m., Tuesday, March 1, on the Mississippi ETV Network.

The film points up the plight of former asbestos workers, focusing on the story of Alice Jefferson, a recent victim of asbestos-caused cancer. She had worked with asbestos for only nine months—30 years ago.

"Nova" sets this British documentary within the context of America, where about 20 million people have been exposed to asbestos. "Nova" investigates the ramifications of the Chapter 11 bankruptcy filling of the giant of the American asbestos industry, the Manville Corporation.

Asbestos misuse has created a medical and social problem of enormous proportions. Asbestos has been recognized as a lethal cancer-causing agent since the mid-1950s, but the cancer is causes can take many years to develop. Doctors are only now seeing thousands of cases of asbestos cancer believed to have been caused by exposure to the materials in the 1940s, '50s and '60s.

Quotables by CUEVAS

Things were rather tight at the Hancock County jail Tuesday morning with a population of 40 inmates.

More room is needed at the local facility, especially when it was constructed for 15 inmates some 45 years ago.

The problem of a lack of space at the Hancock County jail is something just about every county in the country faces today.

It is hard to understand how Pearl River County has a new jail in Poplarville which has never been used.

It sure could be used in Hancock County. Of course a jail is not the only facility needed in our county and maybe a new one will be constructed in the near future.

It seems Mississippi's elections will be held starting in August this year with the Justice Department rejecting the changes in qualification dates for Independent candidates.

The August primaries are not too far away and we assume some candidates will be making announcements soon in Hancock County.

We know things are really heating up in Pearl River County.

So far four candidates in Hancock County have qualified in the Circuit Clerk's office, one for supervisor of District One and the other for the new senatorial spot.

Two Pearl River candidates have qualified for the House of Representatives in the new district which includes a portion of Northern Hancock County.

The annual Heart Fund Drive is underway in Hancock County.

Charles Johnson Jr. of Waveland is the county general chairman and he reports a goal of $5,500 has been set.

Dick Kosbab is the Bay St. Louis chairman with Joe Monti, Waveland; and Stan Robert, in Diamondhead. Persons interested in helping the Heart Fund can send a contribution to one of the above. We hope the goal is reached.

We noted where the Justice Department has given an approval to the State Ethics Commission.

We feel this commission is needed in our state and are glad it will not be abolished.

It seems that Mississippi is not the only state making reviews of drunk drivers and passing stiffer penalties. The Supreme Court's ruling this week on refusal to take alcohol test can be used against a suspect should really affect the drunken driver.

Far too many people are being killed each year on our highways and roadways by drunken drivers.

The problem of drunken drivers has been haunting this nation for many years, and we are glad stronger actions are beginning to be taken to get them off our highways.

We were saddened to hear about the death of Mrs. Gladys Noonan last Sunday.

Many times we have seen her take-off to a fire in Waveland by herself in the old fire engine.

She was very instrumental in the organization of the Waveland Volunteer Fire Department.

Known by many Waveland residents for her years of service at the post office, as well as the volunteer fire department, she will be sadly missed.

We have known Mrs. Noonan as long as we can remember, and we want her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren to know she was a very good citizen in the the City of Waveland.

High school band chaperone complains of Hancock parade conditions

Editor:
Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Dear Sir,

I am a Hancock North Central Band parent who chaperones our band to the parades they march in.

I chaperoned our band last year and this year in the Mardi Gras parades. It is a disgrace how we are treated in our own county.

In the Waveland parade this year we had beer cans and beads thrown at our band members.

They tried to throw the beads and trinkets they had caught off the floats into our band members' horns and tried to ring the horns with the beads also.

The problem becomes worse when the band comes to parade rest.

I would like to add that there were hundreds, ranging from 6 or 8 months old to 17 years of age who were drinking and had beer in their hands. Someone needs to open their eyes.

There was abusive language used toward our band members also. It is a constant battle to keep the drums and dope-heads off the band members, especially off our female members.

In the Bay St. Louis parade there was even a man with a six or seven foot snake wrapped around his neck who was standing only a foot or two from our band.

The Mardi Gras season is supposed to be for all to have a good time. This is impossible when you are treated as we are.

Due to circumstances beyond our control there are never enough male chaperones to help protect our children. Sometimes it is left up to the mothers that may weigh only 112 lbs. and are 5 feet 3 inches tall.

That's not much muscle to handle some of the spectators.

I know the cities may think there is nothing they can do about this situation, since they probably do not have enough police people to work these parades. In the Bay St. Louis parade, I informed one policeman that there were some very unruly people a few yards back.

His comment was, "OK." I watched him for as long as I could see and he never moved out of his standing place.

Since there is usually only a small number of bands in these two parades I cannot understand why one policeman couldn't follow each band so they would not be treated in this manner.

I can tell you this, when we go to parades out of our county and state, we are not treated this way. We are treated as royalty compared to our treatment amongst our own people, where we should be most appreciated.

I would in no way mind my child going to the out-of-state parades without me as a chaperone, but in the way would I let her march in the local parades without me?

I would appreciate anything officials can do to remedy this problem in the future. It does need careful attention.

Thank you,

News from the Governor

Gov. William Winter has announced more surplus cheese and butter will be available, to needy Mississippians in March, including 234 cases of cheese and 78 cases of butter in Hancock County.

The Governor's Office of Federal-State Program has set March 3 as the target date for the distribution of Mississippi's fourth allocation under the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Donated Commodity Program.

"Most of the counties will be giving out the dairy products on our target date—the 3rd," said Project Coordinator Buddy Jemison. "The counties have some discretion, however, to give the cheese and butter out when it is convenient with them if they have a conflict on the day we've set."

Eligible for the five-pound block of cheese and two, one-pound blocks of butter are food stamp, Medicaid and unemployment compensation recipients.

The March allocation, valued at $3.1 million, consists of 1,008,000 pounds of cheese and 403,260 pounds of butter and will be delivered to local planning and development districts the day before distribution.

Distribution in each county will be coordinated by the planning and development districts and the local board of supervisors.

Previously stored in Alabama, the cheese and butter is being housed this time in Gulf Cold Storage in Pascagoula. The new arrangement will give the state more control of when the products can be distributed and will free the planning and development districts and counties from having to provide refrigerated storage accommodations, according to Jemison.

"It will be much cheaper and easier for everyone involved," he said. "Now we'll be able to decide on a distribution date two weeks in advance, arrange for trucking and deliver the products to each planning and development district one day before they're given out."

Officials estimate that 210,600 Mississippi families will qualify for the commodity products, which will be given out on the distribution date at sites determined by each county board of supervisors.

Recipients will be required to present their food stamp, Medicaid, or employment service applicant identification cards to site workers before receiving the dairy products.

Persons with vouchers which were mailed out during the previous distribution will be served first this time, said Jemison. Others will receive the dairy products on a first-come, first-served basis.

If any dairy products remain after the distribution, they will be donated to charities that serve meals, county jails, hospitals, schools and other institutions, and charities for distribution to the needy.

The accumulation of millions of pounds of American-processed cheese as a result of federal-price supports led the government to initially donate 100 million pounds of cheese nationwide through the program in 1981. Since then, Mississippi has received three allocations, totaling 1.9 million pounds of cheese and 307,200 pounds of butter.

PUBLIC EMPLOYEES AND THE PUBLIC

The argument for collective bargaining for public employees is one which makes the rounds every few years. And fortunately for Mississippi taxpayers, it's one which sees a few days' light and then disappears.

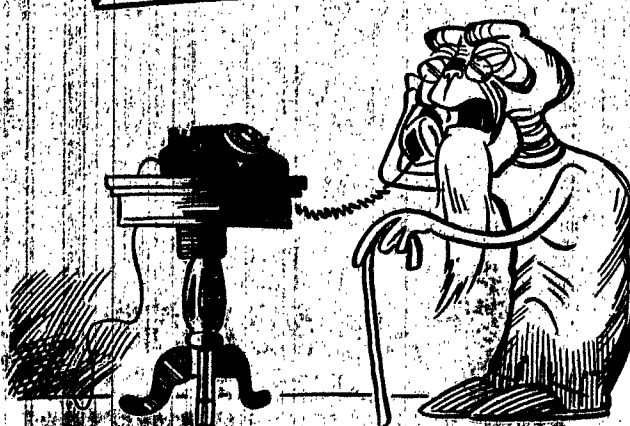

Proposals in favor of public employee collective bargaining have never gained serious support in Mississippi. And the Mississippi Economic Council will continue to support efforts to see that public employee bargaining efforts go nowhere.

The MEC recognizes that a clear distinction must be drawn between the public employees and those in the private sector. The public interest is not served by allowing public employees the privilege of collective bargaining.

It is essential that authority and power given to elected officials not be delegated to a person or organization answerable to neither the governmental authority nor to the public. And it is essential that public services not be impaired by demands, strikes, or other disruptions associated with collective bargaining.

The MEC believes that strict opposition to public employee collective bargaining will preserve the quality of life and ensure the continuation of vital services to Mississippi taxpayers.

President Reagan's tax workers' health benefits would be an active cost containment measure and would heavy tax burden on middle income workers according to Aetna Casualty, one of the largest health insurers.

Keith A. Stevens, vice president of Employee Benefits provided specific evidence on how the proposed changes in the President's package, would work for family.

Based on Health Services estimates, million families' income one-quarter covered by employer-sponsored health would be affected in year alone.

Under the proposal would be placed on non-taxable contributions about $24 for a single person for a family would taxable income employee.

Halfway house to open for alcoholics

LIVE OAKS—Live Oaks, a halfway house for recovering alcoholics, sponsored by the Gulf Coast Mental Health Center, opens in Saucier March 1. In front are director Richard

By BREARD SNELLINGS
Live Oaks, a halfway house for alcoholics sponsored by Gulf Coast Mental Health Center, will open on March 1.

The residential facility for treatment of recovering alcoholics is located on 2.9 wooded acres at a former Girl Scout campsite in Saucier, just outside the Gulfport city limits and six miles from the Mental Health Center in Gulfport.

The new facility will serve residents of Hancock, Harrison, Pearl River and Stone Counties," explained John (Pat) Wilz, coordinator of community services for the mental health center.

"It's being paid for by local and state funds, with the mental health center being the parent agency. A lot of the funding is coming from the three percent alcohol tax on alcoholic beverages."

The facility will have room for 13 men and six women, with 19 beds and no more than two patients to a room.

"A person can enter Live Oaks by being referred by any doctor, social worker or the mental health center," Wilz explained.

"A patient will be charged according to a sliding scale fee, going from nothing for indigents to $30 a day for a person earning $25,000 a year in a single-family household," explained Richard Williams, the director of Live Oaks.

"There will be a permanent staff of 11," said Williams, "including a director, two counselors, a resident manager, two relief managers, two out-care social workers, two cooks and a secretary."

People wishing information on Live

Oak can telephone 467-0183, which is a toll-free number.

The 2.9 wooded acres includes a barbecue pit, volleyball and badminton areas, horseshoes and wooded walking paths.

"The price of admission includes meals, bed and planned group activities from 6:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. each day," said Williams.

"To enter Live Oaks, you must be an alcoholic, and not come in for treatment of a drug problem," he added.

Live Oak patients must sign a contract to stay a minimum of six weeks for the full active therapy. In addition, the mental health center is offering four weeks of follow-up outcare on a sliding fee scale.

The facility will be open 24 hours a day.

Radiation food processing may become canning, freezing substitute

Radiation processing of food "is versatile and has the potential to provide more food, of good taste, with fresh-like quality and of wholesome and nutritional value to consumers," according to a newly released Scientific Status Summary from a panel of good safety and nutrition of the Institute of Good Technologists.

Moreover, said Dr. Charles W. Shannon, extension food technologist at Mississippi State University, IFT's regional communicator for Mississippi, its costs in money and energy should "make it competitive with older food processing methods."

Irradiation is a "cold" process, according to the IFT, so nutritional losses are minimal. Also, there are few adverse changes in flavor, odor, color, or texture.

Irradiation is a very flexible process, so it can be used to process a variety of foods in a wide range of sizes and shapes—whole crates of potatoes, sacks of flour, whole turkeys, or sandwiches of sliced meat, fish or chicken.

It can also be used to extend the shelf-life of foods before they spoil. In fact, predicts the scientific society, this will probably be its first application, in a manner similar to pasteurization of canned ham and other highly perishable foods. In contrast to presently used pasteurization, however, the resulting food products would not be cooked, and hence could be used in other kinds of recipes or serving styles.

Radiation processing may thus make it possible to ship chilled coastal fish and seafood to Midwestern markets without freezing, for example.

At higher "doses," radiation can also be used to prepare "commercially sterile" food products, which could then be stored on pantry shelves at room temperature like canned foods.

According to the IFT Status Summary, such products could include shelf-stable pork, sausage and corned beef briskets. Irradiation can also be used to control insect infestation in cereals and flour, or in fresh or dried fruits, instead of chemical fumigation. Since it is a "cold" process, it can be used to decontaminate spices without driving off their unique flavor and odor-producing compounds.

"In-depth food irradiation studies in the United States began in the early 1950s, when both radiation sources and processing equipment were developed to a practical point," according to the IFT Status Summary.

"Most of the studies have been government sponsored, because regulations required advance approval from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) before any particular irradiated foods could be publicly sold. A similar circumstance prevailed in other countries."

The current renewed interest in food irradiation results from recent actions by the U.N.'s World Health Organization and the U.S. FDA. The WHO has recommended that foods treated at relatively low levels of radiation (less than 1 megarad) should be considered wholesome and approved for human use without further testing; the FDA has announced that it plans to issue a proposal which would essentially allow approval of all foods irradiated at one-tenth that level without individual testing.

According to the IFT Expert Panel, this amounts to evaluating food irradiation as a process like canning or freezing, rather than examining each irradiated food product for approval as a new food additive.

The IFT communicator stressed, however, that government approval of food irradiation, if and when granted, will not automatically mean that supermarket shelves will be loaded with radiation-processed foods.

"The cost of irradiated foods to the consumer must be competitive with the cost of foods produced by alternate processing technologies, or they must satisfy some other perceived consumers need at a reasonable cost, if they are to be accepted and successful in the market place. Irradiation of foods must also be seen as useful enough by processors to justify the costs of the equipment needed and the process."

Health care insurance tax to burden low, middle incomes

President Reagan's plan to tax workers' health insurance benefits would be an ineffective cost containment measure and would place a heavy tax burden on low and middle income workers, according to Aetna Life & Casualty, one of the nation's largest health insurers.

Keith A. Stevenson, assistant vice president of Aetna's Employee Benefits Division, provided specific examples of how the proposed tax, included in the President's budget package, would affect a worker and family.

Based on Health and Human Services estimates, about 16 million families—approximately one-quarter of those covered by employer-sponsored health plans—would be affected in the first year alone.

Under the proposal, a limit would be placed on employers' non-taxable contributions to employee health plans. Contributions about $240 per year for a single person and $2,100 for a family would count as taxable income to the employee.

As an example, Stevenson said that for a family with taxable income of $25,000 and $2,100 in employer health plan contributions, this so-called "tax cap" would result in an extra $115 in federal income tax.

In addition, Stevenson said, employees in similar situations in most states would pay about $30 more in state income taxes and $100 more in Social Security taxes. For these workers employers would also pay an additional $7 as their Social Security contribution.

"Assuming your employer is willing to absorb the employer Social Security tax, you would pay an extra $163 in taxes on $400 you never saw—that is a 41 percent tax rate," he said.

Some economists believe the tax cap would lead employees in this situation to persuade employers to reduce their health insurance benefits by $400. This would place the benefit below the cap and employees would ask for the money in additional wages or other fringe benefits.

However, Stevenson warns, if an employee takes the $400 as wages, it will still be taxed through federal, state and Social Security taxes.

Also, he pointed out, there is no guarantee the tax cap will be indexed to the rise in total health spending. Medical care costs have risen faster than the costs of other goods and services. Last year medical costs rose 11 percent, while the Consumer Price Index increased by 4 percent.

If, in the example provided, the employer raised the employee's health benefit by 15 percent the next year and there were no change in the tax cap, $775 of the benefit would then be taxable. The total taxes paid would rise from $183 to $315—a 94 percent increase. At this rate, in three years this family would pay $700 in taxes on health benefits alone.

"So there is a very strong, hidden averaging effect in the tax cap," Stevenson added. "Ironically," Stevenson said, the tax cap "aims to cut private health insurance coverage after years of effort to expand coverage."

FRIENDS of the HANCOCK COUNTY LIBRARY SYSTEM

FEBRUARY NEWS LETTER

Dear Friends:

Our purpose is to improve the present moment, and accomplishments made possible through your help, concern and care are worth numbering.

Haven't our docents given us some excellent programs? Isn't our Display Case a real credit to the Hancock County Community? Doesn't it just fill your heart with delight to see so many cars parked around the library?

That means people with shared interests are attending meetings, checking out books, entertaining their children with story and song, buying books on the sales shelves, or reading periodicals.

On Saturday mornings as well as after-school hours our students come because they realize the truth of Ann Landers' statement: "No one needs to remain ignorant if he would prefer to be informed."

Isn't it grand to see so many lovely flower arrangements and plants ever in evidence at the Main Library?

Two really outstanding events are coming up. Mark your calendar now. The beautifully enlarged and refurbished Waveland Library will have open house on Sunday, March 6 from 3 to 5 p.m.

Don't miss this long-awaited function. Waveland can feel justifiably proud!

Our regular March meeting of the Friends of the Library is scheduled for Thursday, March 3 at 7:30 p.m. We will meet at the Main Library, using the Uman Street en-

DR. PAUL CHEESMAN

Be sure to extend an invitation to your friends, guests, neighbors and students as we are most fortunate to have an outstanding speaker.

Dr. Paul Cheesman, a university professor for 17 years, who received his master's and doctorate degrees from Brigham Young University will give a lecture-slide program.

Shall we call it "Rocks of Ages?" Dr. Cheesman has made over 40 trips to Latin America, is the author of five books on Archaeology, and is a professional photographer.

He is presenting this program gratis. We deeply appreciate his generosity. Let's fill all the chairs at this meeting.

And yes, we will have a little "added surprise" you'll enjoy hearing.

NERVOUS INDIGESTION

This business man came directly to us after his doctor could find nothing that was causing his indigestion. He became so easily irritated and upset. He had no sleep, no energy, but he certainly could not enjoy his food. The pressure of business was blamed for the condition. We made a thorough chiropractic adjustment and spinal stress and tension were released. The indigestion disappeared and his business prospered with more energy than ever! Chiropractic made years before 1975 and 1978 in your years.

Dr. Wm. L. POWELL, D.D., D.C., D.P.O. They advocated a chiropractic adjustment of the spinal bones compressing and pinching the nerves which lead to the stomach. We believe this and advise Chiropractic adjustment to remove the pressure from the stomach nerves. He can eat like a horse now and is totally composed. He has more energy than ever! # Proposed Henderson Point marina includes 124 slips

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

A Gulfport firm is proposing to build a 124-slip marina in the Bay of St. Louis in Henderson Point.

The proposed facility will be located immediately north of the bay railroad bridge and expand existing dock facilities, a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Mobile, Ala. District office public notice indicates.

Paradise Marine, Inc. of 1820 22nd Avenue in Gulfport is seeking a Corps permit for the project which will include a 1,700-linear-foot timber breakwater and 2,300-linear-foot of six-foot-wide piers which will form 124 boat stalls, the notice states.

In addition, the notice lists the marina will include a two-story 2,500-square-foot harbor master's house with an observation deck; and sewage system including hookups for boats, a pumping station and on-shore holding tank.

Doris Perry, a Corps public affairs specialist in Mobile, Wednesday afternoon said Phillip Briant of the company requested the permit.

Briant or a company representative were unavailable for comment this week regarding the project.

Perry said the Corps has no dollar estimate of the proposed project.

Marine plans presented to the Corps also indicate a two-story dry storage area apparently capable of housing at least 80 boats will be built nearby on shore.

The notice states piling for the breakwater are already in place and were installed to hold a floating breakwater, but these plans were abandoned for various reasons.

The Corps is now asking for public comments or will accept balled requests for a public hearing regarding the proposed project.

Any questions regarding the proposal should be directed to Arch Middleton or Jean Racine at the Mobile Corps office by telephoning 205-694-3786 or 205-694-3787.

Corps eyeing Portage maintenance request

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is now studying the feasibility of maintenance dredging the Bayou Portage. Channel which serves the Pass Christian Industrial Park.

Doris Perry, a Corps public affairs specialist at the Mobile, Ala. office, this week reported the agency has completed about 26 percent of a $41,000 study regarding the proposed project.

Joe Brown III of Joe Brown Engineers of Gulfport Wednesday confirmed the Harrison County Development Commission recently requested the Corps fund the channel project.

Perry said the proposal calls for an eight-foot-deep and 4.5-mile channel extending from that depth in the Bay of St. Louis, northward toward the Wolf River and eastward up the bayou to the industrial park.

Harrison County has been responsible for maintenance dredging the channel, Perry reported.

The Corps will determine if the maintenance work should be adopted as a federally-funded ongoing maintenance project, she added.

Also underway is a $76,000 Corps study which will establish several offshore dredging spoils disposal sites in the Mississippi Sound.

Perry said the study will establish spoils sites for new and existing Corps channel maintenance dredging areas offshore from the coast, including projects near Hancock County.

In other recent Corps actions, the federal agency:

—Issued a public notice regarding a project by Gloria C. Zambuto of Miami, Fla. who is requesting a permit to dredge an access channel from Portage to property at 23 Pinecrest St. in Harrison County and construct a dock in the canal;

—Cancelled or the Purcell Co., Inc. of Diamondhead withdrew a permit request to construct a bulkhead and pier on Cutoff Bayou;

—Cancelled or Grady C. Cothan withdrew a permit request to build a bulkhead and place fill on a Bayou Boisore site;

—Revised a Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission permit for maintenance dredging of the Port Blenville access channel to include dragline work to remove obstacles at the port terminal;

—Issued general permits for pier construction to N.W. Chagnard on Jourdan River, E.A. Lamana on a canal near the Jourdan, and Roland Martin on Delisle Bayou; —Determined a Nationwide Permit (for relatively small projects) is necessary for Purcell to construct a bulkhead and boat dock on Cutoff and Advanced Development, Inc. of Bay St. Louis to repair a bulkhead in the Pass Christian Harbor;

—Determined a permit is necessary for the Jourdan River Shores Property

Owners Association to maintenance dredge several canals in the development;

—Determined a permit is necessary for Dr. Lawrence Derbes to construct a jetty in Harrison County in the Bay of St. Louis;

—Determined a Nationwide Permit is necessary for Grady C. Cothan to construct a bulkhead on Mallini Bayou in the Henderson Point area and Irvin Lacoste to build a bulkhead and dock on an unnamed canal off the Jourdan; —Issued After-the-Fact Permits to B.E. Brejan for a bulkhead, dock and boat slip on Bayou Boisore and Jerry Reed for a bulkhead and boatramp on Edwards Bayou.

Pass harbor boat berths are limited

The number of boats that will be permitted to dock in Pass Christian Municipal Harbor has been indefinitely limited by the Pass Christian City Council.

"We've set a limit of 20 boats above what we have slips for," said City Attorney Frank P. Wittmann III, "and we'll see if we can reasonably control them. After awhile, we'll take a look and see if we need to adjust this figure up or down."

The harbor has slips for about 300 boats.

The harbor has slips for pleasure and commercial boats, with designated slips for each. The additional spaces will be made on the commercial side of the harbor, along the east bulkhead near the seafood processor, according to Pass Christian Mayor Gordon Bishop.

The reopening of portions of Telegraph and Pass Marianne reefs to oyster dredging Saturday morning made the limited harbor space even more limited.

When the two reefs closed several weeks ago because of an unacceptable bacteria level in the water, the harbor was holding about 75 more boats than the facility is designed to accommodate.

"Besides being a safety problem, there was the problem of trying to collect the overnight fees," Wittmann explained. "Most of the extra boats were transients, and they were being provided temporary berthing."

The overnight rate at the harbor is $5.25.

"The harbor is pretty much clear of the transients now, and we want to avoid a repeat of the situation that existed there for awhile," said Wittmann.

"The common excuse given by fishermen for not paying their overnight fees was that they couldn't find the harbor master," said Bishop.

"But this excuse won't be accepted anymore," the mayor added. "It is their responsibility to find the harbor master."

The harbor master has two offices in the harbor, one on the west side, and one on the east side near the seafood processors.

"Someone in authority is on duty at the harbor 24 hours a day, so there's no excuse for not paying the fee," said Wittmann.

The penalty for illegal or unauthorized berthing at Pass Christian Municipal Harbor is a fine of $500 or 90 days in jail.

Noted archaeologist slated to address Library Friends

By JOE PILET

Coordinator, Friends of the Library Ancient America is the topic of a slide-lecture program scheduled for Thursday, March 3 in the Bay St. Louis City-County Library.

Dr. Paul Cheesman, a university professor for 17 years with both master's and doctorate degrees from Brigham Young University, is expected to discuss his archaeological findings with emphasis on Mexico, Central and South America.

All interested persons are invited to attend this lecture which is sponsored by Friends of the Library and will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Guests are asked to use the Ulman Street entrance to the building.

Well qualified as an author, lecturer, and producer of many educational films, Cheesman has made more than 40 trips to Latin America and has written five books covering discoveries and studies of ancient buildings, tools, culture and way of life of people who lived thousands of years ago. He is a member of the International Epigraphic Society and shares his study of ancient writings through his nationwide lectures.

The archaeologist relies to a certain extent on related sciences such as the zoologist for identification of animals, the physical anthropologist skilled in identifying races of early humans from parts of their skeletons. Religion, social organization and customs of prehistoric people are also revealed.

Dr. Cheesman will present this lecture-slide program free of charge and it is open to all interested persons of the Gulf Coast community.

In sponsoring the program Friends of the Library selected this topic because of the widespread interest evidenced in learning how archaeologists discover sites, their methods of digging and dating materials, the mapping and photographing and the part taken by various museums in making unusual objects available to further public education.

A social hour following the lecture will give guests and all in attendance an opportunity to meet Dr. Cheesman.

PRICE OUTLOOK

One of the biggest challenges Mississippi farmers will face in 1983 is receiving the most for their crops. "Farmweek," the weekly television series about Mississippi agriculture, will broadcast a story about the price outlook for Mississippi's major crops at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Feb. 28, on Mississippi ETV.

Also on the program will be information about the Payment-In-Kind program as it relates to corn and grain sorghum producers.

Every edition of "Farmweek" offers viewers weather forecasts for the upcoming week, market reports, farm news, production tips and notification of upcoming agricultural events in the state. The series is co-produced by Mississippi ETV and the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

Savitch, the program tracks the government's traveling "road show" across the country as federal agencies—especially the Defense Department—pitch to local businesses eager for new contracts.

The Pentagon, with a budget of $238 billion this year, dominates these sessions.

In Indianapolis, viewers hear Secretary of the Navy John Lehman tell some 1,200 businessmen: "Every billion dollars of this defense spending generates 40,000 jobs. For instance, the aircraft carriers in this year's '83 budget—$200 million will go directly into Indiana in just the aircraft carrier program."

What is the business reaction to these pitches? What choices do these businessmen and businesswomen have? "Frontline" probes for the answers to these questions.

DEFENSE SPENDING

"Pentagon, Inc.," the next documentary in the "Frontline" series, examines U.S. defense spending at 9 p.m., Friday, Feb. 25, on the Mississippi ETV Network.

Higher Learning Board sets teacher candidate admission standards

The Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning unanimously approved admission standards to enter professional teacher education programs at the eight state universities.

All students entering teacher education programs beginning in the fall term of 1983 must obtain a score of at least 170 on the Composite Examination of the College Outcome Measures Program (COMP), a composite test administered by ACT Corporation of Iowa.

Other requirements include a score of at least 17 on the speaking area of the COMP, a score of at least 17 on the writing area, and a 2.25 grade point average overall on a 4.0 scale through the end of their sophomore year.

Students with an ACT Assessment composite score of at least 18 or a 3.20 grade point average overall on a 4.0 scale through the first semester of the sophomore year may bypass the major portion of the COMP Composite Examination and take only the speaking and writing areas.

Serious concern for a higher level of educational achievement led the Board of Trustees in April of 1981 to decide that more stringent standards for entrance into teacher education programs needed to be imposed.

According to Dr. Robert W. Harrison Jr., president of the board, "There are simply too many less well prepared teachers in the classrooms of Mississippi. They are not only inadequately serving Mississippi children but also are doing a disservice to the many excellent classroom teachers we have in Mississippi."

Therefore, the Board decided to utilize a compensatory test as a criterion for entrance into teacher education. A year of sample testing in 1982 led to the adoption of the present standards, he added.

Board-approved changes in the admissions standards for transfer students will become effective fall semester, 1984, instead of Feb. 7, 1983, as previously stated.

Any student who has a deficiency in the required high school units and who does not meet exemption criteria must attend an accredited institution of higher learning other than those under the governance of the Board of Trustees and must attain a "C" average (2.0 GPA on a 4.0 scale) in six semester hours of English composition, three semester hours in college algebra or above, six semester hours in laboratory science, and nine semester hours of transferable electives before transferring to an institution under the governance of the Board of Trustees.

The board's approval of the feasibility study for the construction of a new football stadium at Alcorn State University clears the way for Alcorn to proceed with construction plans.

The new stadium will accommodate 20,000 spectators and will cost approximately $5 million.

The feasibility study approved calls for the renovation of the existing stadium to accommodate intramural sports and track.

The board must now request funds from the Legislature and implementation by the State Building Commission.

A new health, physical education, and recreation facility was approved for the University of Southern Mississippi.

The estimated cost of the project is $11,500,000.

The board will request the Legislature to make an appropriation in the amount of $9,000,000. Additional funds needed will be provided by the university from self-generated funds.

In other action at its February meeting in Jackson, the board:

—Delayed until the March 1983 meeting consideration of a request to waive board policy requiring that all programs at an institution must be accredited before a new program request is honored.

A proposal for a bachelor of science degree in computer engineering at Mississippi State and an advanced registered nursing program for Mississippi University for Women were requested.

—Approved proposal for purchase of Magnolia Dormitory on MUW campus by the Waverly Group. This proposal will assume the unmet schedule for debt retirement and will pay to the University the amount of $135,000 at the time of contract signing plus a cash amount of $300,000 to be paid at the time of contract signing. The total cost settlement will be $435,000.

—Approved a $3 increase in summer school fee charges, effective first term of 1983 summer session at Delta State University.

—Approved a $5 food services increase and dormitory fee increase of $36 for the 1983 summer session at MUW.

Food service and dormitory fees will also increase $60 and $30 respectively for the 1983-84 academic year.

—Approved a $4 increase in semester hour fees for part-time students to become effective May 1, 1983, at Mississippi Valley State University.

SOUTHERN ENCYCLOPEDIA—Working on a new encyclopedia of the South are co-editors Dr. Bill Ferris (left) and Dr. Charles Wilson at The University of Mississippi.

The Sea Coast Echo

Book Review

SOUTHERN ENCYCLOPEDIA

A unique book is taking shape at The University of Mississippi—a Southern smorgasbord of the real and the unreal, the actuality and the imagery of the region.

It's the first Encyclopedia of Southern Culture, co-edited by Dr. Charles Wilson, assistant professor of history, and Dr. Bill Ferris, director of the Center for the Study of Southern Culture.

It'll be a big, sprawling alphabetized epic of all that is Southern or imagined to be.

There'll be Architecture here and Louis Armstrong, Barbecue, Bourbon and Black Culture, Cotton and Catfish, Dialects, Desegregation and the Daytona 500.

It'll stretch its pages to include Ethnic and Environmental, Fauna, Flora and Huckleberry Finn, Grits and Billy Graham, Hillbillies and Hilton Head.

The personalities will span Elvis and Edgar Allan Poe. The pages may smell of Everglades swamp water, beignets from the Vieux Carre or a Lone Star longneck bottle of beer from Gilley's. William Faulkner will be here because he is part of the definition of the South; Harriet Beecher Stowe, because she greatly influenced its destiny.

The politics stretch around John C. Calhoun and Andrew Young. Topical sketches by a who's who of Southern professors will cover Storyville, Kudzu and the Burma Shave signs, the lore of the Opposum, the ambience of the Smoky Mountains, and the effect of the hot climate on productivity.

"A lot of it will be fun because so much of the Southern culture is fun," said co-editor Wilson. "We're striving for literary values, with pictures and layouts that will be appealing to the eye, and topics cross-referenced so that one can lead into another for enjoyable browsing or reading."

When published in 1984 or 1985, the encyclopedia promises to meet several needs. It will be the first such comprehensive book to include virtually everything about the South. As such, it will meet the needs of research scholars. And its entertainment value should make it a popular seller, a treasure for many a Southern library.

It will be costly—probably over $40 per book, though it will be big and bountiful.

The various printing and production costs could have been higher—$60 to $80 a book—but the University of North Carolina Press, which is producing the volume, is subsidizing it with its own development funds. That reason, along with the enthusiastic response in Tarheel country, their production facilities and their excellent track record with reference works, made them the choice for production.

And now if it will all come together...

Wilson is heading a team of esteemed scholars who will cover 24 major subject areas. Countless others will contribute. The Center is inundated with millions of words and hundreds of pictures and possibilities that require editing, categorizing and turning into a finished production.

And who will be included? Will W. E. B. DuBois be there? Yes, and Atticus Finch and Zora Neal Hurston, too. Mule trader Ray Lum from Vicksburg will get space. So will Justice Hugo Black, Gene Autry and entrepreneur Ted Turner.

"These are some of the big questions," said Wilson. "Who gets in? We not only want to deal with icons, but with writers, musicians, all sorts of different people who may not even be Southerners, but who have affected the imagery of the South."

Wilson will include film makers such as Martin Ritt ("Norma Rae"), Robert Altman ("Nashville") and "Thieves Like Us") and D. W. Griffith ("The Birth of a Nation") who have presented works on the South that have significantly affected the nation's view of the region.

"We are really dealing with two Souths in a way," said Wilson, "the real one and the mythical one. And we will deal with both continuity and change, the values and things that are passed on through the generations, and those things which have changed and are constantly changing."

In addition to the contributors, Wilson and Ferris are also gathering information from national archives, state tourist boards, museums and other sources. They have found in some subject areas, such as college fraternities and sororities, which are popular in the South, that there is no significant writing on the subject. So the volume will stretch somewhat the body of facts and imagery about the South.

"And, though the end result promises to hold a prestigious place in Dixie literature, it will be a threshold too."

"It will be like a summation of the whole field of study," said Wilson, "telling just about everything we know about the South, and so suggesting new areas for study and the need to analyze some subjects from a different perspective."

"The South has distinctiveness as a region like no other," said Wilson. "Its culture is kept alive through books and films and many other things. It will remain distinctive because of these forces, including the encyclopedia, he thinks."

"Southerners continue to think they are different," said Wilson, "and that's part of what makes us different."

USM professor's research may release King Arthur from realm of myth

A University of Southern Mississippi Professor of Medieval French and Latin has found documents which are helping to prove that King Arthur was a historical fact, not a romantic legend.

Barbara Moorman's interest in researching the fabled king began last summer when she and her husband, renowned Arthurian scholar Dr. Charles Moorman, were in London. He was teaching a course on the Arthurian legend, she was doing literary research in the British Museum.

Geoffrey Ashe, an international Arthurian scholar, writer and friend of the Moormans, asked her to research French and Latin records to see if there was a connection between a 5th century king named Rithamus and King Arthur.

Ashe had found a British account which referred to Rithamus as Arthur and other records which reported that Arthur led an expedition overseas to Gaul, or modern-day France.

He suspected the two were the same. Moorman completed her research and supplied Ashe with her notes. Three French chronicles recording events up to the year 1525, mentioned Arthur and placed him in the right time period to be the Rithamus Arthur suspected by Ashe.

The French research also matched with other records of the time and recorded that Arthur crossed the English Channel and fought the Saxons in Brittany, in what now is the northwest of France (an account overlooked by British historians until now).

The French papers also showed Arthur had diplomatic relations with other rulers who were known to have existed in the 5th century. Moorman and Ashe are members of an international committee of genealogists and historians investigating the legend for a book to be published in 1984.

Ashe, appearing on a recent CBS Evening News program, said that his research has led him to an ancient citadel at Cadbury, England which is 12 miles from his home.

He took part in archaeological excavations at the site in the 1960's and now believes it to be the home of the real Arthur.

The legend of King Arthur, Guinevere, Lancelot, Camelot and the Knights of the Round Table, grew from an oral tradition of story telling and myths. The legend places Arthur in the Middle Ages, but Ashe, Moorman and a growing number of scholars believe the true Arthur was the 5th century man they have found.

If the 5th century Arthur was indeed the man who is the subject of the modern romantic myth of a kingdom free of troubles, he certainly did not live in a utopian environment.

The Dark Ages were beginning. Rome, its boundaries once extending into what is now England, was in shambles and collapsing as an empire. The golden age was dead and raids by Scotts, Picts, Saxons and other Germanic and Nordic peoples plagued the Celtic Arthur and his contemporaries.

Countless conflicts destroyed much of the recorded histories left by the retreating Romans.

According to Moorman, only "one or two" additional scraps of information are needed to satisfy the researchers that their man is the historic Arthur.

"One thing we hope will be found are certain 12th century manuscripts on the European Continent," Moorman said. "A colony of British monks settled in Brittany in France before the 9th century. They migrated to the Loire River, established a monastery and we have a list of what was in their library."

One listing revealed that a History of Britain was among the monastery's archives, but the whereabouts of that history is unknown today.

Bermond, Warden win in vo-tech skills olympics

Chris Bermond of the Hancock Vocational Center took first place in auto mechanics at the annual District IV High School VICA Skills Olympics held recently at Pearl River College.

Joseph Warden, also of Hancock Vo-Tech, placed second in electrical trades.

The Harrison County Center picked up 10 awards including four firsts, five seconds and one third.

The Pascagoula Vocational Center was second in total awards as its students grabbed three firsts, three seconds and one third.

George County Occupational Center of Mississippi Gulf Coast Junior College picked up two firsts, two second and a third place award and the R.D. Brown Vocational Center in Biloxi received one first and a second place and three thirds.

Other vocational-technical centers receiving awards were Gulfport High School, a second and two thirds; the Poycaine Vocational Center a first and second; Poplarville High School received two thirds and St. Martin High a first and third.

Schools getting one award were Pearl River College's Lamar County Center, Forrest County Center and Mississippi Gulf Coast Jackson County Center.

The VICA Olympics, which was hosted by PRC in Poplarville, included skill contests in extemporaneous speaking, job interviews, opening and closing ceremony, prepared speech, club business procedures, architectural drafting, auto mechanics, bricklaying, carpentry, welding, electrical trades, machine shop, mechanical drawing, cabinet making and millwork and sheet metal working.

First place winners in each contest in each of the five districts will compete in the overall state Olympics scheduled for Jackson, April 27-29. The state event will feature top students from junior colleges as well as the high school district winners.

VICA (Vocational, Industrial Clubs of America) began in the late 1920's but the organization as it is today was adopted at the National Trade and Industrial Youth Conference in May 1965.

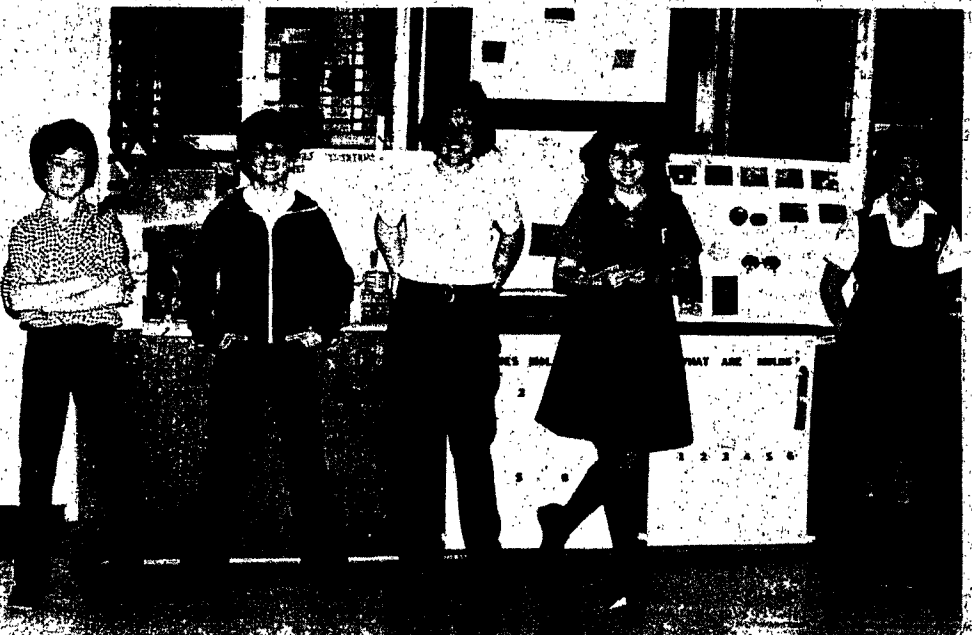

Dr. James Soode, dean of vocational-technical education at Pearl River College, coordinated the day long event, assisted by Charles Reese and Walter Pichman, PRC instructors and advisors to the Pearl River College VICA Chapter.

Ole Miss preparing to train future Justice Court judges

Come Jan. 1, 1984, Mississippi's 415 Justice Court judges will be reduced to 195—a thinning of the ranks brought on by a federal court ruling and a subsequent major overhaul of the system by the Mississippi Legislature.

To Bob Doyel at The University of Mississippi less means more. The law requires extensive training for the new judges before they can even hear a case, then an annual training program to keep them abreast of new judicial knowledge.

It means a lot of work before the November elections, compiling 32 hours of curriculum which the elected justices will study before taking office Jan. 1, and setting up 18 hours of study for each succeeding year in a full four-year sequence of continuing education.

It means some concerns about money, too. Doyel, associate professor of law and director of the University's Court Education Program, is in charge of the training operation through one of the four parts of the program—the Mississippi Judicial College.

Even while beginning to work hard on developing the study courses, he wonders how it will all be financed by the state.

Last year the Court Education Program was created by the Legislature and funded by a $1 per case filing fee in the state courts and with federal grants.

This year, the grants aren't available and Doyel hopes the $1 fee collections will cover the operating costs.

He thinks the total Justice Court training package could cost an additional $30,000 to $40,000. This includes the courses for the new justices, as well as another mandated program for their clerks.

But, confident that the money will be provided to meet the dictates of the new law, Doyel is heading a team of lawyers who are already underway with the work.

Training the justices is nothing for the University or the Judicial College, but in the part it has been strictly voluntary. The new law makes it mandatory.

It will result in a much-improved Justice Court system, Doyel thinks, and will round out an overall Mississippi training program that he considers to be among the best in the nation.

"Mississippi is a leader in judicial education," said Doyel. "Maybe only one or two other states devote more resources to training its judges and prosecutors. This new program should really enhance the dispensation of justice in the Justice Courts because the training is now required, and the amount will be increased substantially."

Doyel explained how the Justice Court system came to be overhauled in Mississippi. The U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in the Brown vs. Vance case in 1981 that the defendant has been denied his constitutional rights because of the manner of operation of the Mississippi Justice Courts, specifically that they collected fees based on the number of cases handled which could adversely affect their administration of justice.

The court ruling prompted the Legislature to re-vamp the system, setting up salaries rather than fees for Justice Court judges, specifying the training requirements, allotting for each county a clerk to order assign case loads to each of the county's Justice Court judges, and reducing the number of judges significantly, partly to finance the new salaried operation.

Doyel expects all of the 192 justices to be on hand for the post-election training, barring illness, since they can't legally function without the 32-hour course. It will likely be a week-long seminar held in Jackson.

The law makes no distinction in qualification. An experienced trial lawyer or judge takes a training course the same as a novice. But Doyel and his associates are addressing the issue of different types of training geared to the different educational backgrounds and experience of the participants. This is strictly in the "thinking state" at present.

Under the current system, there are five Justice Court judges in all counties except Hinds, which has 10. The new system allows for five in Hinds and Harrison, four in Lauderdale, Jackson and Washington and two or three in the remaining counties. Each county will have one clerk.

Pass school system delays action on teacher pay hikes

The Pass Christian School Board, at a Friday meeting, reacted favorably to a recommendation by the State Forestry Commission that the school district advertise for bids for a timber sale on 16th section land.

Mark Gibson, representing the Forestry Commission, appeared before the board and gave a brief report on the duties and activities of the Forestry Commission.

According to Gibson, the commission has the responsibility of managing the 16th section lands for the school district. The area is patrolled in an effort to deter misuse of the land and timber growing on the land.

Gibson stated that an on site inspection is made at least once per month in addition to the regular borderland patrols throughout the month. Acting upon a recommendation of Superintendent LeRoy Lizana, the Board voted to advertise for bids and set the bid opening date for March 8.

Lizana reported that there was a reluctance on his part to recommend any salary schedules for school district personnel at this time.

Lizana stated that although the Mississippi Legislature voted a 10 percent raise for all school teachers, during the special legislative session in December 1982, there are now signals out of Jackson that there are insufficient revenues to cover the raises as voted.

Lizana stated that should the board adopt the raise as voted in the special session and the Legislature decided to defer the raises because of insufficient revenues, there would be problems.

He indicated that he would be in a better position on recommending salaries at the next meeting of the school board.

In a further report on salaries Lizana noted that he had made some preliminary calculations on the effects of the 10 percent raise on local funds.

The preliminary figures indicate that it will take approximately $50,000 of new money to fund the raises for teachers.

This sum does not include any administrative raises or increases for non-certificated personnel.

In addition to raises the new law creates additional school personnel that must be considered. There are provisions in the law for assistant reading teachers beginning the 1983-1984 school term.

The bill requires one reading assistant in each first grade classroom beginning the next school year.

Implied in the wording is that the state will provide one reading assistant for every 24 students in average daily attendance (A.D.A.) in the first grade.

Therefore, in instances where school districts have classes where the A.D.A. is less than 24, the expense of the reading assistant is then transferred to the school district.

In addition, according to Lizana, the education bill provides for an increase in insurance benefits for teachers. Currently, the district provides $150 per year in fringe benefits for insurance for school personnel.

The state reimburses the school district $100 per year for each person receiving the benefits. Therefore, the expense to the school district from local funds is $50. Under the new bill school districts are permitted to increase the insurance benefits to $250 per year and the state will reimburse $175 of the cost.

The board accepted the recommendation of Lizana that the district administrators be reemployed.

The administrators re-elected were George T. Watson, assistant superintendent, two-year contract through June 1985; Adrian Swann, principal, Pass Christian High School; John Deem, assistant principal, Pass Christian High School; Michael Bonney, principal, Pass Christian Middle School; Robert White, assistant principal, Pass Christian Middle School; Sharon Lembright, principal, Pass Christian Elementary School; and Patricia Zatarain, principal, DeLisle Elementary School. All principals' and assistant principals' appointments were for one year - through the 1983-1984 school term. School district supervisors re-elected for one year terms were June Markwalder, special education program developer/examiner, and Virginia Pavolini, a supervisor of district cafeterias.

The school calendar for the 1983-84 school term was adopted. As scheduled, the 1983-84 school term begins on Friday, August 26. The last day for classes will be May 23, 1984. The scheduled holidays are: Labor Day, Sept. 5; Thanksgiving, Nov. 24-25; Christmas Dec. 19-30; March 5-6 Mardi Gras; April 16-19 Spring Break; and, April 20 Good Friday. High school graduation is scheduled for May 25.

The claims docket of bills, invoices, and payrolls were approved. Board approved bills totaled: District Maintenance $48,413.64; Chapter I $108.00; Consortium $6.95; P.L. 94-142 $119.50; M.P. Transportation $1,493.51; Cafeteria $11,767.10. Special Bills approved included payments to Hattiesburg Roofing Company $34,600.50 for roof repair work; Hancock Bank payment of $12,367.40 for bus notes; Mississippi High School Activities Association an assessment of $116.00 for the high school band to participate in the State Band Contest; Lanier Business Products a payment of $380.00 for renewal of maintenance contract on office machines; a payment of $2,966.99 to Coast Maintenance, Inc. for the installation of heaters at the Pass Christian High School and DeLisle Elementary School; and, a payment of $328.00 to John Mykolyk and Associates for architect fees for projects within the district.

Payrolls approved for the month of January included District Maintenance $63,155.32; Minimum Program $94,438.54; P. L. 94-142 $1,657.83; ECIA Chapter I $7,290.50; Cafeteria $11,792.90 and Student Activity $168.00.

The Board accepted the low bids of $2,050 received from Saucier Brothers, Roofing and Sheet Metal for roof repairs at the Pass Middle School and Environmental Construction Company's bid of $1,000 for temporary repairs to the Sewer Lagoon at the DeLisle Elementary School.

formed the board that only one candidate qualified for the school board position expiring in March, 1983. The qualifier was Nelvin Ladner who is currently serving his second term as president of the Pass Christian School Board.

According to Lizana, the law provides that should there be only one candidate qualifying for the position on the board it is not required or necessary for an election to be held. Therefore, Nelvin Ladner has qualified for another five year term on the board.

The next meeting of the board is scheduled for March 8, 1983, in the Board room at 701 West North Street, Pass Christian.

Tutoring offered at Gulf Park

The University of Southern Mississippi at Gulf Park will offer tutoring for children in grades two through eight with reading difficulties, said Dr. Nancy Maszta, the Gulf Park Reading Center director.

"The one-to-one evaluation and tutoring promotes positive attitudes toward reading and enhances the students' self-concepts," Dr. Maszta said. "Undergraduate and graduate students in the Department of Curriculum and Instruction at Gulf Park will serve as instructors to the children."

The lessons will be taught twice a week after school, beginning the week of March 21 and ending the week of May 9. The bi-weekly sessions are 50 minutes each and the total cost for all sessions is $40.

For additional information about the classes, or to enroll a child in the spring session, contact Dr. Nancy Maszta at (601) 863-6232.

THING LABELS

The labels on your clothes are not just for show. They tell you how to care for them. You are not alone. Even professional cleaners do not depend on labels. Labels are in determining the best method of cleaning a garment.

The International Fabricare Institute's (IFI) research takes calls daily from consumers who receive garments labeled "dryclean only" but suspect that standard drycleaning methods will not be satisfactory.

Often the drycleaners are right. The Institute's research often test-clean items labeled "professionally clean only" and find synthetic materials that shrink or become stiff and brittle. Or they find colors that fade, bleed and bleed.

The problem lies not with the cleaning itself but with the clothing manufacturers who give little attention to how fabrics and trims they use will withstand maintenance.

Some manufacturers attach care labels to their clothes without testing the cleaning method the label recommends. Still others produce clothes the IFI lab finds difficult to clean by any means.

The Federated Trade Commission (FTC) requires manufacturers to attach labels telling consumers how to care for clothes. These labels, in combination with the information offered on some tags that come with new clothing, should guide you in the care of your new purchases. But some common sense and some conversation with your drycleaners will bring the best of care.

Some rules to remember will make sure your clothes are cared for well:

1. Keep care labels attached to clothes. Some may be large, but the information on them is necessary to avoid damaging the clothes. If you take a multi-piece outfit to the cleaners, take all the pieces along — not all pieces are labeled and all should be cleaned together to keep them matching.

2. Keep the hang tags that came attached to the clothes at the time of purchase. Clothing-makers sometimes are reluctant to put complete information on the sewn-in tag, but will include additional information elsewhere. Show these instructions to the cleaners. A neat way to keep hang-tag is to staple them to an index card and file them close by your laundry center.

3. If you sew your own clothes, ask for care labels when you buy the fabric. The manufacturer is required to provide tags you can sew into the outfit you are creating. These are usually available at the check out counter.

4. If, after following instructions, your clothes are damaged, return them with the sales receipt to the store's buyer. The store should refund your money and can return the outfit to the manufacturer for credit. Clothing-makers beset with returns may, in the future, label their clothes more accurately.

strong.

The methods you use — whether right or wrong. Quite different methods and removers are used on fabrics that cannot be laundered. Start right, and you can remove most stains.

Remember: Stains are easier to remove while fresh.

Some stains are set by laundering. Some are set by heat. Always pretreat. Know your fabric. Is it washable? Colorfast? Test an inconspicuous part if you're not sure.

Can you use chlorine bleach on the fabric? Check the care label attached to the garment. If a garment is not washable, take it to a dry cleaner.

Identify the stain for the cleaner. Home treatment might set stain and make the job impossible for a professional to remove.

Follow the best methods. If two or three methods are given, try the simplest one first.

Turn the fabric upside down on paper towels or tissues. Treat stain from back side of fabric; change towels or tissues often.

Work lightly — don't rub! Sponge rather than rub.

PROTEIN STAINS

(Chocolate, Coffee, Cream & Milk, Egg, Fresh Fruit & Juice, Ice Cream)

PRECAUTION: Always begin with cool water. Hot water sets protein stains.

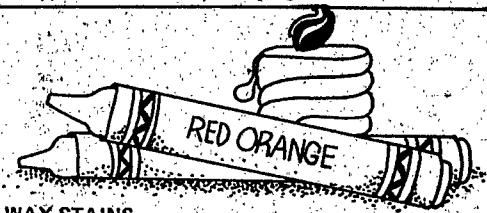

Soak in cool water with enzyme presoak product for 30 minutes, longer if necessary. Launder. If greasy stains remain, sponge with a dry cleaning solvent. Allow to dry. Repeat if necessary.

Mayonnaise, Tea, Vomit: If color stain remains, use a bleach according to fabric content and finish.

WINTER OVERCOAT.

Don't Go Out Without It.

WAX STAINS

STAIN PROCEDURES
WAX STAINS: (Candle Wax, Crayons, Floor Wax, Paraffin)

Scrape off as much wax as possible with a dull knife. Then place between several layers of facial tissues and wet thoroughly with a safe cleaning solvent. Launder. Repeat process if necessary. If a color stain remains, bleach according to fabric.

TAR/ASPHALT

Act quickly before stain dries. Follow above recommendations.

GREASY STAINS (Oils, Food Fats, Lipstick, Makeup)

Rub detergent into the stain or treat with a prewash spray product. Launder in hottest water suitable for the fabric. Soaking is sometimes necessary to remove the stain. You may need to use a grease solvent to remove the grease stain. Put stain upside down on a soft cloth. Dampen thoroughly with a spot remover. Rub, but do not rub. Launder.

Bleach may be needed to remove yellow stains set by heat and age.

HARD-TO-REMOVE STAINS

Ballpoint Ink: Some inks cannot be removed. Some ball point inks are set by water. Test for washability by marking on a scrap of similar fabric and then washing.

Sponge with rubbing alcohol or spray with hair spray until wet looking. Use tissue to absorb ink. Rub detergent into stain. Launder. Repeat if necessary. Old stains may require bleaching. Bleach according to fabric.

Deodorants: Rub detergent into dampened stain. Launder in hot water, using chlorine bleach. Antiperspirants that contain such substances as aluminum chloride are acid and may not be restored by sponging with ammonia. (For wool and silk, dilute ammonia with half water.) Rinse thoroughly.

Grass: Work detergent or soap into stain; rinse. If safe for fabric, sponge with rubbing alcohol. If stain remains, use the kind of bleach which is safe for the fabric and finish. Or soak using an enzyme-containing laundry product. Wash in detergent. Bleach if necessary.

Mildew: Treat promptly. Laundering will usually remove fresh stain.

If slight stains remain after laundering, moisten with lemon juice and salt and dry in the sun. For stubborn stains use a bleach suitable to fabric.

Perspiration: Wash or sponge stain with soap or detergent and warm water. If color has changed, apply ammonia to fresh stains. (Dilute ammonia used on wool and silk.) Apply vinegar to old stains. Rinse. If stain has yellowed, follow directions and use a bleach that is suitable for the fabric.

Rust: PRECAUTION: Do not use household bleach on rust stains. Sprinkle with salt and moisten with lemon juice. Spread in the sun to dry. Repeat if necessary.

Special rust removers are available at drug stores.

GREASY STAINS

REMOVING STAINS
Laundering removes many stains on fabrics but "sets" others, so it is wise to treat stains before you put the article in the laundry.

Removing stains can be easy or hard. Your success will depend, in part, on:

— The stain itself — some stains can never be removed.

— The basic — its fiber content, finish, color.

— Age of the stain — fresh stains are easier to remove than older ones.

— The products you use (stain removers) — how effective they are, how mild, or

A manufacturer of optical equipment used to include this note with his products: "There are two types of people who will take this apart: those who know how, and fools."

All home mechanics would do well to hang this bit of wisdom in the garage and workshop. Modern cars are nothing if not complex, and if you do the job wrong, it can damage your ego and your bank balance.

Paul Weisler, Mechanix Illustrated's auto service expert, offers these tips to keep you out of trouble. First, read the directions. There are excellent service manuals for sale in bookstores, or you can take one out of the public library. It's a simple step, but most people ignore it.

Second, never use force if you can help it. Often a part will not come off because you have not moved a hidden nut, bolt or snap ring. The latter are very popular these days, and often you won't know they're there without the service manual. Use the proper tool—usually a snap-ring pliers—to get them off. Taking a screwdriver and prying for all you're worth will only damage them. If a part is really stuck, it often can be freed with a little penetrating oil and a lot of patience.

Finally, once a part is removed, replace the nuts, bolts, clamps, etc. where they belong both for safekeeping and easy re-assembly.

OKEFENOKEE

Okefenokee, a one-hour documentary special revealing the true nature of the mysterious Okefenokee Swamp, airs Thursday, March 31, 7:05-8:05 p.m. on WTBS, Hancock Cable channel 7.

Prepared for Turner Broadcasting System by nationally acclaimed wildlife filmmaker Dennis Holt, Okefenokee is narrated by TBS Board Chairman R. E. Turner.

Located in southern Georgia and northern Florida, the Okefenokee is 430,000 acres of water-logged land. The swamp has terrified and fascinated men for hundreds of years.

It is home to a few hardy people and to hundreds of species of plants and animals; all of whom live by the law of the swamp — "Eat, or be eaten."

Okefenokee, a documentary special, will interest environmentalists, armchair tourists and nature-lovers all over the country the producer feels.

McDonald's ties Loiacano's in Bay Area Soccer upset

1. Saturday's action in the Bay Area Soccer Club, in the Under-8 Division the Firebirds behind Chad Perrone's three goals shut out Specialty Metal 4-0. In a close game Coca Cola edged past the Scrappy Doo's 2-0 on goals by Brian Gagnon and Joe Dobson. In the final game the undefeated purple Knights blitzed Hancock Bank 8-0 behind Richard Watson and Scott Pepperman.

In the Under-10 Division, the leader Loiacano's was tied by McDonald's Restaurant 2-2 in a well-played game, and ranks as a minor upset. In the other games McDonald's Realty downed Stark's Restaurant 6-1 and Little Italy shut out American Legion 7-0.

In the Under-12 Division, in the opening game it looked like an upset in the making as the Strikers led Mary Carter Paints 1-0 at halftime behind Trae Kidd's goal and Troy Davis' strong goaltending. However, in the last ten minutes of the game Mary Carter Paints scored four goals to win 5-1 and maintain the Division lead. In the second game Farm Bureau, Kiln put up a valiant effort, but fell to Hale Homes 4-0 with Billy Guice's three goals. In the final game of the day Dr. Murphree DDS, edged the Golden Eagles 2-1 with Eric Gray getting the winning goal.

In the Under-14 Division, the Scrappers defeated visiting Picyaune 5-2 behind Shane Kowalski's two goals. In a League game, Gulf Coast Waste bested Bay-Waveland Tire 11-0 with six players scoring.

Home of the South, with only eight players, tied SMSC in Gulfport 2-2 on goals by Eric Doyle and Tom Walton. Both girls' teams also were on the road. The Sea Coast Echo Panthers were shut out in Ocean Springs 6-0. The Sportsworld Giants did not fare any better as they lost 4-0 at Stiddell despite a fine first-time goaltending effort by Paula Holmes.

This coming Saturday finds virtually all the teams at home for picture day. Photographer James Wedworth will be at the Seminary Field all day starting at 8:30 a.m. All coaches and parents should make an extra effort to have all the players there for pictures together with the $8.50 for each picture packet.

The schedule for Saturday in the Under-8 Division is: 10 a.m. Coca Cola vs. Hancock Bank; 11:30 a.m. Bears vs. Specialty Metal; 1 p.m. Purple Knights vs. Scrappy Doo's. In the Under-10 Division at 10 a.m. American Legion vs. Loiacano's; 11:30 a.m. Hancock General Hospital vs. Little Italy; 1 p.m. McDonald's Realty vs. McDonald's Restaurant.

Xavier's Francis spotlights 'nationwide crisis'

NCAA rule on academic eligibility deals with symptoms, not causes of nation's educational ills

The current controversy over the National Collegiate Athletic Association's new stiffer academic requirements is overshadowing a much larger nationwide crisis, according to Dr. Norman C. Francis, president of Xavier University in New Orleans and the United Negro College Fund.

Referring to the general debate and charges of "racial bias" which have surfaced as a result of the NCAA's recent decision to require a 2.0 high school grade point average and a minimum Scholastic Aptitude Test score for its entering student-athletes, Dr. Francis said too much discussion has centered around superficial questions, such as the legitimacy of the SAT.

What has not been addressed is the real problem, he said, which is the failure of this nation's school system to properly educate all its young.

"Educational measuring devices, the debate over the SAT and the ACT notwithstanding, show that American youngsters, both black and white, are not doing as well in their academic endeavors as their earlier counterparts," he said.

"The major issue of providing an equal opportunity to quality education cuts across racial lines and is more directly related to economic levels than cultural or ethnic backgrounds."

"If one comes from a poor family, he or she is more likely to attend a school that is less prepared to challenge individuals into realizing their full academic potential. The fact that minorities are disproportionately poor means that they are unfortunately more likely to become educationally disadvantaged," he said.

Dr. Francis said the new NCAA rule, which in effect continues to deal with only the symptoms and neglects the causes—that is, the need for better teaching, better facilities, tougher courses and higher standards on all levels of education—does not go far enough.

While Dr. Francis applauded the NCAA's bold step in tightening its academic requirements—particularly the regulation requiring a 2.0 grade point average for high school core courses—he said the inclusion of the SAT minimum was a dangerous step in the wrong direction.

Unlike many of his black colleagues, however, he doesn't base his objection on "racial bias," but rather contends that the NCAA's plan is in effect using the test for a purpose it was not designed.

"The SAT and ACT were both designed to be used in conjunction with the student's high school transcript for the purpose of admissions," said Dr. Francis, who currently serves as vice chairman of the Educational Testing Service, the organization which prepares the SAT and ACT tests for the College Board.

"In effect it was designed to include students, not exclude them."

Dr. Francis said the NCAA's requirement of both a 2.0 average and a minimum SAT score gives the SAT score a weight it doesn't deserve.

He did, however, reject the argument that the SAT is so "culturally biased" to explain low scores.

He said that the SAT is not merely a measure of potential aptitude, as many believe, but is also an achievement test which accurately measures what students have learned to that point.

He contends that most students do poorly on the test simply because they have never been taught the concepts that will help them to understand what testing and test-taking is all about.

It is an educational disadvantage not an inability to learn.

As an example, he pointed to the math section, which comprises half the SAT test.

"There is nothing culturally biased about math, the plain truth is that students in poorer schools are never taught to deal with word problems, that is, 'critical analysis,' which make up a substantial part of that section," he said.

"The problem therefore is not with the students, nor with the test, but rather with an educational system which fails to teach youngsters what they need to know."

Dr. Francis reiterated that the NCAA ruling does not go far enough, and, in the case of the SAT cutoff, is an unfair and potentially dangerous one.

"To blame the messenger who brings the bad news simply obscures a problem that must be addressed by educators, parents and public officials," he said.

"Education is serious business and it is high time we made that clear. Athletics is an important part of the development process—but it is secondary, not primary."

Dr. Francis said that if the NCAA is really committed to stiffening its academic standards it should adopt a tougher rule in regards to monitoring students once they have enrolled in college.

As it stands, the NCAA rule merely requires that students be making "satisfactory progress" in a program leading to an academic degree.

"What the NCAA should do is to require schools to make diagnostic tests of their student-athletes, determine their academic weaknesses, and set up the support program they may need," said Francis, pointing out what Xavier and most other predominantly black colleges have been doing for years.

"Schools should then be required to monitor that student's progress each year in regard to grade point average and the types of courses being taken," he said.

"If, after all the appropriate support has been given, a student-athlete still can't make the grades, he should be dealt with like any other student when it comes to academic ineligibility and expulsion."

Lady Wildcats lose in semis

Despite placing all five starters in double figures in Friday night, the basketball season for the Pearl River Junior College Lady Wildcats came to an abrupt end in the semifinals of the South Division Tournament.

Paced by Darlene Davis' 24 points, all five Lady Wildcat starters scored in double digits, but so did all five of Utica's starters in a 91-86 slugfest won by Utica on Friday.

Davis, who poured in 17 points to help the Wildcats advance with a 92-62 win over East Central in Thursday's opening round, was followed by Christine Fairley with 21 points, Carmen Reed with 17, Jackie Ridgway with 16 and Sharon Williams with 14.

Utica, who advanced to Saturday's championship game against top-seeded Copiah-Lincoln Junior College, a 67-64 winner over Hinds Junior College in Friday's other semifinal round game, was led by Cynthia Carpenter's 20-point performance.

Other Utica players in double figures included Rose Ellis and Luellen Lewis with 16 points apiece, Linda Perry with 15 and Debra Williams, who chipped in with 14.

As a result of Friday's action here in the Gulf Coast Junior College Gymnasium, Co-Lin and Utica received automatic berths in next week's Mississippi Junior College Tournament. Co-Lin defeated Utica 79-70 for the championship.

Friday's loss put an end to the Lady Wildcats bid for a third consecutive appearance in the finals of the South Division Tournament.

Last year, the Lady Wildcats knocked off Co-Lin's Lady Wolves in the championship game en route to posting a 19-7 overall record and advancing to the National Junior College Region 7 Tournament. In the 1980-81 campaign, the Lady Cats qualified for the state tournament, but lost in the finals of the South Division Tournament.

Ned Eades, PRC's assistant basketball coach, said poor second half free throw shooting spoiled the Lady Cats bid for a victory.

Despite canning a respectable 12 of 19 charity tosses for the entire game, the Lady Wildcats converted on only one of nine second half free throws. "What it boils down to is the fact that they hit and we missed the shots down the stretch," Eades said.

Eades also said that Utica, who put together a 16-point lead early in the second half, also took advantage of PRC's second half foul trouble. "We had three girls playing with four fouls late in the game," he said. "The foul situation caused us to play a little less aggressively under the boards and allowed Utica to convert a few easy rebound baskets."

Despite falling behind by 16 points, the 14-9 PRC roundballers fought back to cut the deficit to 77-76 with approximately six minutes to play, but could get no closer than that.

Track meet set Monday

The Jackson State University-Coors Interconference track meet will be held Monday, Feb. 28 in JSU's Athletics and Assembly Center.

The indoor meet, which will feature the two top athletes in each of the 24 events from four predominantly Black conferences, will get underway at 4 p.m. Monday.

The conferences involved are the Southwestern Athletic Conference (SWAC), Midwestern Athletic Conference (MEAC), Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (SIAC), and the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association (CIAA).

With the addition of a possible eighth team to the League, the schedule for Thursday and next Tuesday was not available at press time. There will be four games a night with eight teams starting at 6 p.m., and the season will end on April 12.

Bay Church League games

The Bay Area Church Basketball League opened its season last Thursday with two games.

The opening game was the most exciting game of the evening as St. Paul and St. Rose battled evenly throughout most of the game. However, St. Paul came out on top, 37-26, with Steube getting 12 points and Curvas 10 points. Henderson with 6 points was high for St. Rose.

In the second game the Baptists behind T. Barrell's 15 points blew out Meth/Lu 38-13. Alliston was high for Meth/Lu with 5 points. The scheduled OLG vs. SCLC game was not played, but will be rescheduled for April 12.

With the addition of a possible eighth team to the League, the schedule for Thursday and next Tuesday was not available at press time. There will be four games a night with eight teams starting at 6 p.m., and the season will end on April 12.

FISHIN' TIPS

from Tom Mann

HEAR THAT YOU USE open face reels only—have you always done this?

Nope, I started out like most everyone of my generation... with a spin pole and a can of worms, and there are still some of my happiest fishing days of all. Guess it was because my Dad and my uncle made it such a special thing for us boys. I have used everything from a ZEBCO 33 to an Ambassador, but I just have found the open face to suit my kind of fishing best and I'm more comfortable with it. For the young angler, women just learning to fish, or for the older anglers ZEBCO has a super line of rods and reels that are not hard to handle but get the job done. ZEBCO has come out with a super line of graphite rods with reels to match that are unbeatable. This is the line I am using now and I could not be more pleased with them. I own three sizes, small, medium and light salt water gear.

TO MY YOUNG FISHING BUDS: Are you taking part in the ZEBCO FISHAMERICA PROGRAM? If you're not, get busy. It's a great thing for all you boys and girls that love to fish. My most important question is, are you having a good time with your fishing and are you releasing all your fish you do not intend to eat? Please do this for Tom and for yourselves good buddies, because I want you to fish for the rest of your lives and you can do it if you don't waste. Bring about the ones you put back, some folks will believe you, and those who don't, well, put 'em back anyways.

Ship Island is classic example of public land

One-third of the nation's land is owned by, and maintained for, American citizens.

This common estate, often referred to as "public lands," contains uncommon variety.

Compare size — the neighborhood park with the Arctic Wildlife Range; shape — windswept barrier beaches like Ship Island on the Mississippi Coast and the majestic Grand Tetons; purpose — the solitude of the wilderness, chainsaws felling timber, cattle grazing or hikers plodding along the Appalachian Trail.

In 1983, the National Wildlife Federation will conduct a year-long campaign to remind the public of its responsibilities to ensure that the public lands are maintained for citizens to use and to enjoy.

Highlighting the campaign will be the Federation's annual National Wildlife Week, during which more than 15 million citizens will become actively involved in understanding public lands and the citizen's role in helping determine the best use for the public estate.

Already, nearly half a million educational kits promoting Wildlife Week are being distributed to schools and other conservation education centers throughout the country.

"This Is Your Land: Public Lands Belong to All of Us" is the theme for Wildlife Week, to be observed from March 20 to 26.

National Wildlife Week was first proclaimed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1938 to rally public support for the restoration of a healthy and abundant wildlife population.

The 1983 theme is the fourth time the National Wildlife Federation has stressed how important public lands are to all inhabitants of the United States: the 1949 theme, "This Is Your Land — Conserve It," the 1958 theme, "Protect Our Public Lands," and the 1967 theme, "This Is Your Land," also served as timely reminders that public lands are one of the nation's greatest treasures.

"Our nation's growing population and increased demands for natural resources have greatly intensified the need to manage our national public lands effectively," said Jay D. Hair, executive vice president of the National Wildlife Federation.

"The responsibility of balancing the needs of humans and wildlife on public lands belongs to all Americans. The more we learn about these lands, the more fully we can enjoy their benefits and actively contribute to their wise management."

All American citizens are part-owners of the 740 million acres of public lands — about one-third of the United States, an area approximately the size of India.

In 1872, the United States Congress established Yellowstone in Wyoming — the country's first national park, which was to be, Congress said, "a public park or pleasure-ground for the benefit and enjoyment of the people."

While he was president, Teddy Roosevelt reserved nearly 230 million acres for the public domain. His conservation efforts can be summarized in his own words: "We are not building this country for a day. It is to last through the ages."

Many Americans aren't aware that they are part-owners of public lands such as the White House in Washington, D.C., the sand dunes of Cape Cod National Seashore in Massachusetts, and the remains of ancient dinosaurs buried in the Dinosaur National Monument in Colorado and Utah.

America's public lands are scattered all across the continent — from the smallest city park in the East to the majestic mountain ranges that stretch across the West, and the towering forests of the Pacific Northwest.

They contain long, unbroken stretches of desert dotted by flowering cactuses; light-footed herds of antelope racing across grasslands at speeds of up to 60 miles per hour; and crystal clear lakes, rivers and streams teeming with fish.

Waterfowl by the millions nest or winter across these lands; and dozens of threatened or endangered species, such as the Florida panther and our national symbol — the bald eagle — are dependent on these lands for survival.

Public lands also contain an abundance of natural resources — crude oil, rich top soil, thick forests of trees, valuable minerals, and open ranges where cattle and sheep graze.

According to Dr. Hair of the National Wildlife Federation, "President Teddy Roosevelt recognized the value of public lands, not only for their untold wealth of natural resources, but also for their unique beauty and their importance as habitat for wildlife."

Facts about Public Lands

- There are national wildlife refuges in 49 states.
- The United States bought Alaska for about 2 cents an acre.
- Public lands once included 1.8 million acres.
- There are national parks in 24 states.
- "Wilderness" is land where a man visits but does not remain.

Wildcats sign six to football

POPLARVILLE—Pearl River College football coach J.C. Arban has signed six district players to scholarships and has picked up three players here at mid-term, which will help the Wildcats this fall.

Five district high school seniors have already committed to the Wildcats. Included in the list are Richard Bryant (220 pound offensive guard) and Tommy Lindsey (225 pound offensive tackle) from Blair High in Hattiesburg.

Arban picked up George Roy, a 220 pound tackle from Pearl River Central and noseguard Dennis Lacoste (224) from Hancock North Central. The only out-of-state player signed so far is Luther, La.

Power company parent firm develops synthetic crude oil

A major technological advance—which significantly reduces the amount of hydrogen consumed in producing synthetic fuels—has been taken place at The Southern Company's experimental coal research center near Wilsonville, Ala.

If sustained in testing over the next several months, this achievement could make the cost of producing synthetic fuels far more competitive with conventional energy sources.

The Atlanta-based Southern

Company—parent firm of four electric utilities in the Southeast—including Mississippi Power Company which serves the Bay St. Louis—Waveland area, began its synthetic fuel research in the early 1970s with construction at Wilsonville of the country's first solvent refined coal pilot plant.

Over the past decade, the Department of Energy and the Electric Power Research Institute have provided more than $60 million for evaluation and testing at the installation. Dr. William B. Harrison, senior vice president of The Southern Company's engineering and special services arm, said, "Before this experiment, we thought that high levels of hydrogen consumption were impossible to avoid in manufacturing synthetic fuels, adding significantly to the cost of these energy sources."

"But preliminary research over the past two months indicates that from 25 to 40 percent less hydrogen may be needed to turn raw coal into a clean-burning liquid fuel—a fuel which can be burned in power plants or refined into gasoline and home heating oil. With lower hydrogen consumption," he added, "the process is more efficient, allowing up to two-thirds of the raw coal to be recovered as liquid fuel."

Dr. Harrison also noted that the progress recorded at the Wilsonville facility could open the door for America to make full use of the high-sulfur coal which is so abundant in the eastern United States.

In the synthetic fuel process, being studied by The Southern Company, pollutants such as sulfur and ash are removed from coal before it is burned. Raw coal is mixed with a small amount of hydrogen gas and a solvent derived from coal.

This mixture is then heated to approximately 825° Fahrenheit.

Sulfur is removed in the form of gas, and solid mineral residues which normally collect as ash are separated.

The product which results is then fed into equipment known as a hydrotreater. Here the temperature and pressure conditions are very similar to those in the basic process, but the use of a catalyst increases the hydrogen reaction.

This step allows the production of a range of liquid fuels and a solid fuel with a very low sulfur content of approximately one-fourth of the refinery. Liquids from the hydrotreater, the plant's second stage, are recycled to the first stage and used as a solvent for the coal. By carefully choosing reaction conditions and recycling rates, it is possible to produce more fuel of higher quality.

The Southern Company's experimental coal research center is managed by the company's engineering arm, Southern Company Services, Inc., and operated by Catalytic, Inc.

Senior Citizen Happenings

By EVE McDONALD

Coming Events

March 4, we will be taking those who are interested to the Silver Creek Catfish House for lunch. We had so many seniors request another trip there as the dinner was so good when they went at Thanksgiving, we made arrangements to have another lunch there.

This time there will be one difference—we will have to pay most of the cost. Each individual will pay $7 and this will include the tax and tip and ice tea. We are still getting a break on the price from Mr. Mitchell, and we appreciate his working with us.

Those interested in going, call Rosine at the Center, 467-9292. If you can furnish your own transportation, you can follow us out there.

March 8, we will be selling po-boys at the Center again. The cost is $2 and the proceeds (if we make a profit) will go into the Center fund. Call in your order as we will only make 150 sandwiches.

March 9, we have complimentary tickets to the Gulfport Triangle Bowling Lanes. These tickets include free coke, shoe rental, and unlimited bowling. If you want to get up a group, come by and pick up your free tickets. We cannot provide transportation.

PAST EVENTS

Our Mardi Gras party was a big success. The Queen was Audrey Narvaz, King Ernest "Tito" Aponte. The Maids were Ms. Olga Adams, Claire Raphael, and Emma Beal. The "Dukes" were Joe Petta, Buford Taylor, and Joe Brown.

Music was provided by Ronnie Bounce and that was really very lively. The Grand March of the Court was followed by the "costume" contest. Everyone won a prize with Joe Petta getting first place for his Yankee Doodle Dandy.

The court's corsages and bouquets were provided by Riemann's Funeral Home, and the main door prizes were donated by Security Savings and Loan and won by Madeline Gallaty and Ethel Dormain.

The cafeteria was decorated for Mardi Gras by the staff and they also prepared the ham which was donated by Bay St. Louis Councilman Gene Taylor, and the King Cakes donated by Peoples Federal Savings and Loan were the dessert. Prizes for getting the "Baby" was given to Vivian Prague, Paul Lewis, and Blanche Collins.

Mardi Gras day we attended both parades with the Senior Citizens, and had a good time catching beads and doubloons. So many people on both routes were very good about sharing with the seniors the trinkets they caught. Thanks!

Money Talk

By Norine Barnes

The oversize of credit is like an illness that creeps up without realizing what is happening. All it takes to get into financial trouble is a bit of carelessness, a false sense of security, and a few "easy" payments.

Listed below are the early warning signs:

1. You depend heavily on extra income, such as a bonus, overtime, or moonlighting.
2. You have gotten away from saving a little each pay period. What you have put into savings has been withdrawn.
3. You couldn't replace a major appliance without letting some bills wait.
4. You use credit to purchase food, clothing, and items you know your family needs.
5. You play "shuffle" each month. Bills are shuffled to the bottom of the stack and wait longer each month to be paid.
6. You rely on Peter to pay Paul. Money set aside for insurance has to go to pay the electricity bill.
7. You don't really know where all your money goes.
8. You have not listed all your obligations and their due dates.
9. You take out a new loan each time you feel a pinch.
10. You pay for overdrafts on your checking account each month.
11. You have accounts all over town.
12. Your mail box is full of threatening letters and past due bills.

What symptoms does your family have? The "bitter medicine" of changing habits may be necessary to eliminate the symptoms.

Brush fires pose threat to phone service

It's that time of year again! South Central Bell is asking the cooperation of all area residents who plan to "burn-off" their land or property this season.

"Please be considerate of any telephone junction box or pedestal on your property or on the road right-of-way that may be in the area you plan to burn," said Don Roberts, district manager.

"Excessive heat generated by a grass or brush fire melts the telephone wires and causes all area phones to go out-of-order. Not only is this expensive and time consuming to repair, but it creates quite an inconvenience to the telephone users who cannot use their telephones even for emergencies.

"Any property owner who plans to burn off his land should call our toll-free number, 1-888-5356. We will send a representative to locate and mark any telephone equipment in the area. We'll either dig a fire break or remove the weeds and brush near the equipment so the fire cannot harm it.

"This is the same service we offer for those who plan to dig or excavate and are not sure of telephone cables buried in the area," he added.

ETV Brief

BLUES SALUTE

Mississippi ETV salutes the late blues musician Big Joe Williams in a half-hour concert to be telecast at 8:30 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 26.

Williams, who died in December at age 79, has figured prominently in several special programs produced in recent years by Mississippi ETV. Footage never before seen will be a part of the program. Also, segments from Mississippi ETV's "Mississippi Delta Blues," "Bluesman" and "Good Mornin' Blues" will be included in the program.

The 1979 Mississippi Delta Blues Festival, Williams' home in Crawford and a local juke joint provide the settings for such standard blues tunes as "Baby Please Don't Go," "Who's Been Here Awhile Ago," and "Tailor-Made Woman." All songs were played on a nine-string guitar that became his trademark.

Born on a farm near

Crawford in 1903, Williams was the first of 16 children of John and Cora Lee Williams. He made his first guitar at the age of five and was composing blues music by the time he was in his teens. After making his first recording in 1935, Williams played throughout the United States.
